DANIEL DREW.

Eugene N. Rollinson, formerly senior partner of one of the principal brokers of Daniel Drew, submitted a partial transcript this afternoon to the R-gaster in Bankruptcy. The entries in the books show that the gross amount of transactions between Drew and the firm were $75,000,000, which extended over a period of five years.—[Eastern dispatch. One who knew him well describes him as having a " mind of crystal, heart of adamant, hand of steel, and will of iron. " He gave hundreds of thousands of dollars to educational institutions during his prosperity, being desirous of giving the youth of his country chances and advantages that be never possessed. He was the only Wall street magnate that ever successfully " straddled " the market, but he was at last beaten at it. One ot the eleverent tricks in this line that the "Old Man, " as he was called, ever played, was in April, 1865, when by "bearing" and buying Erie stock and then "bulling" it, he managed to get a large quantity of the stock at $42 now because they had to go to Carson, but this is the first one he ever found crying because he couldn't get there. lion dollars by the transaction. But his millions have fled, and they say 'tis pitiful to see the haggard old man wandering around the street that he once made ring with his exploits, without a remnant of his former capital and pres-

THE ORDER OF CAUCASIANS.

This is the age of secret societies The influence they have on society at large is proportionately great. Many of them have at heart the amelioration of suffering, the advancement of merit and the good of mankind. Though secrecy always creates dread in the feble minded and implies power to outsiders, yet in many cases secrecy is necessary to preserve the band of union. But there is an order now being introduced into this State, which, while it champions a worthy cause, uses unworthy means to obtain the desired end and needs deis the "Order of Caucasians." The fundamental principle of the order is good, viz.: a crusade against Chinese labor; but the eternal principles of right and justice should not be overraled. A portion of Article 16 of the Constituton of the Order reads as follows:

10-All who may appear at any time upon the lists of perpetual public enemies. Class A shall be public enemies.

12—Every Caucasian, every camp, every encampment, and the supreme camp, shall labor to impede barrass and destroy a public enemy by every mode, and means, and manner, known and unthought, and act, within the bounds of 13—In his business, his means, his substance, his peace and his success, publicly, privately, socially, commercially, and above all politically.

There are certain turbulent spirits in all times and places who are imbued with communistic ideas and who would willingly see every man upset and troubled provided their own ends were being furthered. In this precious extract we have direct command to every member of that order to "pursue, injure, impede, harass and destroy." verbs have a very plain and forcible meaning. The nobilty of labor is something we all recognize; all attemps at degradation are to be frustrated. But such means as are denoted by the above extract are very questionable. The principles inculcated in that which we have quoted are dangerous ones in any land, doubly so where passion and imprudent zeal may carry them out too foreibly, There is reason in all things. The anti-Chinese movement deserves commendation; and if it meets with success in driving out that horrible race is deserving of all praise. But such venomous docfrine as the above is not worthy of

of great and urgent interest to Charles Huff, recently discharged from custody at Carson. It urges the necessity of his departure very forcibly, and says: "It is in the interest of his health alone that we speak. The air is light at this altitude, and sometimes asphyxia attacks a very healthy person." The subject of these flattering remarks will hardly stand upon the order of his going, but go at once,

Among the literature that it is said Sitting Bull has perused, he must have found a work on arbitration. He has sent word to Queen Victoria, asking her to act as arbiter between the Sioux Nation and the United States. If she accepts, he guarantees to furnish an overwhelming argument in his favor.

The editress of the Ogden Freeman says: "We are not the least bit afraid. If any one attempts to do us an injury in person or property we shall have no hesitation whatever in laying him cold." Stand back

A branch of the Order of Caucasians has been organized in Reno. This order is being introduced in California until there are now over seventy camps in that State, embracing about ten thousand members. This is remarkable, con-sidering it bas only been six months since the organization of the order. This has become already a mighty influence towards the suppression of Chinese employment, and for the encouragement of white labor in that State.

Then there were but eight ladies present participating in the dance, though the entire feminine element of the town was represented; there were present a goodly assemblage of men, but such an uncouth assemblage rarely graced a ballroom, for proud was he who could boast a coat to hide his woolen shirt, and the two or three who had white shirts were at once the admiration and envy of the rest."

R. C. The personals in the papers published a hundred years ago were as piquant as any printed in our own day. Even Mar-tha Washington was mentioned in a London journal as having separated from her husband thus: "Mr. Washington, we hear, is married to a very amiable lady, but it is said that Mrs. Washington, being a warm loyalist, has separated from her husband since the commencement of the present troubles, and lives, very much respected, in the city of New York." The following is from some newspaper of the day: "Thirteen is a number peculiarly belonging to the rebels. A party of naval prisoners lately returned from Jersey say that the rations among the rebels are thirteen dried clams per day; that Mr. Washington has thirteen toes on his feet (the extra ones have grown since the Declaration of Independence), and the same number of teeth in each jaw; that the Sachen. Schuyler has a top-knot of thirteen stiff hairs, which creet themselves on the the crown of his head when he grows mad; that it takes thirteen Congress paper dellars to equal one penny sterling; that 'Polly' Wayne was just thirteen hours in subduing Stony Point, and as many seconds in leaving it; that a well organized rebel household has thirteen children, all of whom are expected to be generals and members of the High and Mighty Congress of the thirteen United States when they attain thirteen years; that Mrs. Washington has a mottled tom-cat (which she calls in a complimentary way, Hamilton,) with thirteen yellow rings around his tail, and that his flaunting it suggested to the Congress the adoption of the same number of stripes for the rebel flag."

CURIOSITIES OF THE 200 PIECE.-Two years ago the 20c pieces was ordered. The object was to reduce our coinage to decimal. But, unfortunately, the 25c piece was also continued. Nothing was, therefore, gained by the change, except the confusion resulting from two coins nearly the same size. Hopes were entertained that by this coin we would get rid of the phantasmal "bit," which, bough it has no real existence, occupies s place in all our transactions. But the 20-cent pieces never entered into general circulation in this city. Large numbers of our citizens never saw one of these coins, though last year 1,253,590 of them were turned out. But the strangest part of the story is to come. The New York Journal of Commerce charges that they are distributed at the other side by some process of favoritism, and are not acces sible to the general public. The journal in question says that these 20-cent pieces bave been quoted in New York at 20 per cent. premium or four for a dollar. And this is not the last of the puzzles which Why should cluster around this coin. they be worth more than the haives and quarters? Are they especially suitable answer any more than those which are connected directly with the distribution. There is a chance here for the use of the microscope on a very extensive scale The history of the 20-cent piece all around might make juicy reading. [S.

A lively pupil at a seminary asked the Preceptress for permission to drive out with a gentlemen. "You know the regu-lations of the institutions," was the answer. "Is he your father?"
